Dear Mike,

Yesterday we got the news that the Germans quit in Italy which just about ends the war for us here. Of course the rumors are flying around just like a plane does but what our fate will be of course we don't know. I'm afraid to even venture a guess because I'm sure it would be wrong. We all like to think that we're going back home for a while any how, but even that no one knows. This thing moved awful fast in its last stages. Not so long ago we could hear the boom of the big guns and now every thing is silent. One can even notice the absence of the number of planes in the air. Every day our groups alone used to make the earth shake when they all flew over at one time, to say nothing of the other groups that followed. Now the planes stop flying its definite definite proof that its all over.

I got your package that contained the callouse pads and the pads that are shaped round is the kind I like best. I'm going to Rome tomorrow on official business.

Hymie
